

Tell a tale

Tell a tale is a party game of movies, books and fun. It is a game for 2+ players of ages 7+, that can be played as an educational or simply party game.

Each turn a theme is drawn – it represents a genre of movie or a book (the players choose). After that players together choose 5 words that represent that genre – for instance for a comedy it can be fun, laugh, fall, monkey and horn, or for crime it can be murder, death, detective, rose, and gun. After that each player draws up to 7 cards from 10 different decks. Each deck has cards of one theme, and each card has one word in 4 languages.

Each player that, using words in his hand and representing words, creates a name of a book/movie. He can change the words so they become nouns/adjectives, and change their time, case, make it plural or singular and add connectives...

After that each player presents his name, and tells a tale- a synopsis of that movie/book they thought of. It should not be a movie/book that already exists. In the end each player votes who's name and story they like the best. Each player gets points equal to number of votes times number of words they used from their hand.

The game ends at the certain number of points, or after certain number of turns.
